

HMS VICTORY!

By Benji Williams

SPLOOSH! The whaling ship was tossed about the rough sea. The whaling ship was the mighty HMS VICTORY. Known for being Lord Nelson flagship in the battle of Trafalgar. It's got cannons made of pure metal. It's masts suspended high above the main deck. It's ultimate destination-England was in sight. But the ocean had other plans. So when HMS Victory reached the inlet of the Thames the ocean made a huge water wall. The all on-board the mighty HMS Victory weren't giving up that easily. And finally HMS Victory plowed through the water wall.

But that wasn't the end of the ocean's revenge. So when let the Victory set off to New Zealand it made a tsunami so big they could flood the whole British Navy. But the admiral had a plan. He increased the speed to Maximum. The crew feared the worst. But the Victory didn't sink. It went upside down. And before you knew it, the Victory was surfing down the massive wave. To make a long story short: HMS Victory survived.

Again this was met by the ocean's rage. "I must sink HMS VICTORY or die" the ocean screamed. Underneath the sea a gang of little men were planning to steal HMS Victory and pull it down into the depths of the sea. And soon HMS Victory was back on the high seas." We need to get past this ocean otherwise we will lose HMS Victory and drown" cried the Admiral. The men heard the admiral's cries and got ready to throw the ropes. But the captain vered out of the way of the failing ropes. The boys were furious at the emerald because they had to obey what their master said. "You did not get it did you?" cried their master. "HMS Victory is the most precious sailing boat ever to be on the high seas. You must bring it down into the debt otherwise you will be fired." The men gulped. You never been spoken to by their master like this before. They would bring it down otherwise they would have to find another master to serve. Back on HMS Victory things were going very well; they had got past the sea and we're now travelling through the Northern sea towards Japan.

“Well done crew we have got this very dangerous it's like it's playing tricks on us but we've made it’ said the captain. The sky was blue and everyone was looking up at the clear blue sky; they didn't notice that ropes were plunging into the Victories main deck. It made a dent in the Victory’s hull but didn't make any holes. But the hooks hooked round the hull of the Victory and started pulling it down to the ice cold water.” Help “cried the captain. But it was too late the ropes had pulled the Victory down under the depths of the cold cold water. For a moment the Admiral thought all was lost. But the crew still ran around the ship trying to unhook the ropes to let the crew and the Victory get to their destination. And finally the crew unhooked all of the hooks and let the Victory float up. The boys knew what was going to happen next so they went on to find another master.

The sea was planning another attack; to pull the Victory down and make it one of the other shipwrecks. But what he didn't know was that the Victory had loaded their cannons with fireballs. So when the ocean made another attack it would be hit by the Fireballs and never seen again.
