Chaperon Rouge

Strolling through the forest on a sunny beautiful day, Chaperon Rouge-Red-intelligent-female-was approaching a bridge while golden,brown and weird shaped leaves were falling beside her. She started to feel alive while she was walking free fully across the old, grey and mossy bridge, while she crossed the old bridge water, the streams were as clear as day and as loud as a stampede of elephants in the hot desert day. Chaperon Rouge walked through the old, long, and messy grass. There were old, rotten and ancient trees everywhere she walked. She fought hard to walk through the blowing wind as she walked through the deep forest. The trees were as dark as dark chocolate and the grass looked like seaweed in the ocean ready to be eaten. She walked across the bridge and heard the river stream. Chaperon Rouge came upon this abandoned village on the way to her destination... It became dark real fast so she grabbed some sticks and wood then made a fire to keep warm for the night and started to fall asleep.

The night was a beautiful baby blue until it became frightful. Everything turned to a bloody red type colour. Shadows were emerging from the dark. They were coming out from under the trees and rocks. The shadows emerged into the lost village and started to destroy everything. Rocks were falling to the ground and then everything was near gone. This big eye looking creature covered her vision and she woke up and started panting viciously then stopped and looked around in a hurry.

Quickly standing up, to grab her belongings she heard a noise coming from behind her. Her dreams started to become true, the shadows emerged like a pack of wolfs finding their meal. Running as fast as she could possibly go the shadows were following close behind her. A couple seconds after running she found herself back in the forest but then quickly realized that there were more creatures in the forest and more trees to run around which would slow her down. "What are these dangerous beasts?" As she sprinted into the darkest part of the forest. She was running around the trees. She was panting viciously in the forest and was very scared. The woods were getting very hard to run in because of all the trees in the way and more shadows came across her. She came across a hill of rocks, Chaperon Rouge had no other choice but to climb them for her life. She was almost at the top until she tripped and hit her head on the sharp rocks.

She got up in the rotten, loud and dark woods. Looking around the woods for the shadow creatures she quickly realised that it was all a dream. Chaperon Rouge looked behind her and found that there is a big staircase leading towards a big shaped building. quickly heading towards the staircase she looked up at the building once more and stood there. The staircase was as big as a giant but she still continued to walk up the giant staircase. Walking inside the giant building the background became the same bloody red from the nightmare, she started worrying but then all of a sudden, SNAP!