OTEMATATA :- MAORI TRANSLATION

PLACE OF GOOD FLINT

Hardly surprising with it being surrounded by rugged peaks and the beautiful lakes of the Waitaki Valley, this area echoes with tales of long ago. The earliest inhabitants were Māori on hunting expeditions or travelling through the valley to reach the inland areas and mountain passes.

Otematata township was built in 1958 as a base for the construction of the Aviemore and Benmore Dams. ECNZ (Electricity Corporation of New Zealand) used it as a base until the early 1990s. Prior to that there were a few 'high country' sheep stations, Rostriever Run owned by the Munro family and Otematata Station owned by the Cameron family. ECNZ's successors, Meridian, now has a small base of maintenance staff with lines and transmission companies also based in the township. As the dam is predominantly operated and monitored remotely, Otematata is becoming a village of holiday homes and holiday makers, plus a growing number of cyclists enjoying our latest addition - the Alps 2 Ocean Cycle Trail.
