

My Three Stars and a Wish

I have tried very hard this year to get better at some subjects. I have gotten better at three subjects and a wish that I'd want to achieve. Matariki has nine stars, and Hiwa-i-te-rangi makes wishes come true.

I've gotten way better at maths this year. I've improved on fractions, division and times tables. I used to be terrified of maths. I've practised and succeeded in maths this year and still have lots to come. I feel delighted when I'm doing maths.

I have also gotten better at writing and using more interesting words and replacing "good" 'them' and "they." I have gotten better at spelling tricky words in writing such as "interesting" and more.

I've also gotten a bit better at reading this year, such as not reading not loud, not quiet, but in a pleasant voice. I've gotten better at reading difficult words in books, and sharing some things that happened in the books.

Next year, I wish to do House Leader for Pukeko house. I will try to achieve this wish by practising and speaking in front of everyone. I'd be very thrilled if I could achieve this wish. I will try my hardest next year.

Matariki is a time of the year, where whanau and friends reflect on the year and celebrate the nine stars. I feel great that I have improved on maths writing and reading. I've learnt a lot so far.
