Qualifications in Chaplaincy

Postgraduate Certificate in Chaplaincy (PGCertChap)

Postgraduate Diploma in Chaplaincy (PGDipChap)

Master of Chaplaincy (MChap)

These programmes are professional qualifications designed for:

- people who currently work as chaplains in a variety of settings, who seek advanced professional education to enhance their work
- people who want to train to be chaplains.

With the help of chaplaincy organisations in New Zealand, we have designed programmes that will meet the needs of chaplains in diverse settings.

All papers are available anywhere via distance learning.

The structure of the qualifications

Qualifications comprise a blend of papers: core Chaplaincy papers (List A) and a choice of more wide-ranging papers that relate to the general interests of chaplains (List B).

The Postgraduate Certificate in Chaplaincy involves three taught papers. All three of these can be taken from List A, or two of the three can be from List A with a third paper from List B.

The Postgraduate Diploma in Chaplaincy involves six taught papers. These are made up of three or four papers from List A, and two or three additional papers from List B.

The Master of Chaplaincy involves the six taught papers taken for the Postgraduate Diploma in Chaplaincy and a research dissertation (MINS 590) worth 60 points (the equivalent of half a year of full-time study). The research dissertation is 16,000 to 20,000 words in length and is an investigation of a topic emerging from the contemporary practice of chaplaincy.

NOTE: The programme offers workshops on research methods for those who have not completed a formal course in research methods. Participation in these workshops is required for those enrolling in MINS 590.

Admission

Admission requirements for the postgraduate certificate, diploma and master's programme are a degree or equivalent three-year qualification (not necessarily in Theology) with satisfactory grades. In cases in which a person's prior qualifications do not include theological study, the student may be required to undertake one or more 300-level papers in Theology in order to satisfy the prerequisites for specific 400-level papers in Biblical Studies (BIBS) and/or Christian Thought and History (CHTH). Direct admission to the Master of Chaplaincy requires an average of B+ in the 300-level papers of the undergraduate degree programme.

From the certificate, to the diploma, to the master's

Students who have completed the three-paper Postgraduate Certificate in Chaplaincy may go on to complete the Postgraduate Diploma in Chaplaincy by taking three additional papers. Students who have completed the Postgraduate Diploma in Chaplaincy may complete the Master of Chaplaincy by undertaking workshops on Research Methods and the research project of 16,000 to 20,000 words.

Qualifications in Ministry

Postgraduate Diploma in Ministry (PGDipMin)

Master of Ministry (MMin)

Would you like to enhance your work in ministry?

These programmes are specifically designed for ministers, priests, pastors and others involved in a range of ministries. Linking theory to practice, the aim is the enhancement of contemporary ministries.

The Master of Ministry is a two-year degree. The Postgraduate Diploma in Ministry comprises the first year of the Master's degree. Full-time and part-time options are available.

The structure of the qualifications

The Postgraduate Diploma in Ministry involves six taught papers, of which three are papers in Ministry (MINS) and three are in Biblical Studies (BIBS) and Christian Thought and History (CHTH).

The Master of Ministry involves the six taught papers for the Postgraduate Diploma in Ministry and a research dissertation (MINS 5) of 25,000 to 30,000 words based on original research of an aspect of the practice of ministry. A research proposal, defining the topic and outlining the method, must be approved prior to enrolling.

All papers are available anywhere via distance learning.

NOTE: The programme offers workshops on research methods for those who have not completed a formal course in research methods. Participation in these workshops is required for those enrolling in MINS 5.

Admission

A Theology degree or equivalent three-year programme of study in Theology, with satisfactory grades, is normally required for entry to both the PGDipMin and MMin. Additionally, a minimum of three years' ministry experience is required for the MMin.

What our students say

Pauline Pyefinch

Bachelor of Theology,
(Pastoral Studies)
Postgraduate Diploma in Chaplaincy
Prison Chaplain,
Prison Chaplaincy Service of Aotearoa New Zealand

I enjoy distance learning because I can work and fit study around any job. When I started studying at Otago I had a young family and lived in Wellington, so distance learning was a great option. I was already studying with another university when I discovered some theology papers at Otago that I wanted to do.

After attending two other tertiary institutions, I am extremely pleased with how much better Otago is in comparison. I have a learning disability and have felt very supported by the disabilities group. I have also found the lecturers to be incredibly helpful and very friendly.

As a prison chaplain, I've used much of what I've learned. I work with grief and mental health issues in their extreme and, as my studies have taught me to understand people, I've learned how to help them. We think of grief as getting over a death, but grief can come from other issues, such as childhood trauma. The chaplaincy paper on grief – though mostly focusing on grief through death – has given me a deeper understanding of other forms of grief.

Studying has not only helped me gain a career in a job I love, it has also helped me understand myself. We don't know what we don't know until we learn it, then once we learn it we become different people because of it.

Brendon McRae

Bachelor of Theology
(Christian Thought and History),
studying for a Master of Ministry
Minister, Flagstaff
Community Church

After a breather from theological studies and training as a minister, I was keen to launch back into study while continuing in full-time ministry.

The Master of Ministry programme ticked all the boxes. It is designed for people like me who are juggling a number of responsibilities but still wanting to stretch their minds.

My studies are forcing me to reflect on my ministry practice and invite relevant questions to consider while providing up-to-date literature and research. Within a rapidly changing society, I am increasingly aware of the need to be continually theologising. Faced with differing pastoral situations and within diverse ministry contexts, the MMin programme has assisted in helping me to pause, reflect, and consider a range of biblical perspectives to my practice. For example, some recent study in Māori theology has provided a helpful lens for me as a Pākehā to engage with the story of Matariki, and as a result how we celebrate this within both my faith community and our wider community.

Qualifications in Faith-Based Leadership and Management

Postgraduate Diploma in Faith-Based Leadership and Management (PGDipFBLM) Master of Faith-Based Leadership and Management (MFBLM)

These qualifications have been designed for professionals involved in the leadership and management of faith-based organisations who seek advanced professional education to enhance their work.

The aim of these programmes is to enhance leadership and management in faith-based organisations through study in both Theology and Business Administration.

All papers are available anywhere via distance learning.

The structure of the qualifications

The Postgraduate Diploma in Faith-Based Leadership and Management consists of 120 points of taught papers. This is made up of three 20-point 400-level taught papers in Theology and four 15-point 500-level taught papers in the area of Business Administration. In each case there is a range of options to choose from.

The Master of Faith-Based Leadership and Management involves the seven taught papers taken for the Postgraduate Diploma in Faith-Based Leadership and Management and a research dissertation (MINS 590) worth 60 points. The research dissertation is 16,000 to 20,000 words in length and is an investigation of some area of the contemporary practice of leadership and management in a faith-based context.

NOTE: The programme offers workshops on research methods for those who have not completed a formal course in research methods. Participation in these workshops is required for those enrolling in MINS 590.

Admission

The admission requirement for the master's and the postgraduate diploma is a degree or equivalent three-year qualification in any subject area with satisfactory grades. In cases where the student's prior qualifications do not include theological study, they may be required to undertake one or more 300-level papers in Theology in order to satisfy the prerequisites for specific 400-level papers in BIBS and/or CHTH.
