Communicating Learning

How do we

COMMUNICATE LEARNING?

At Te Ao Mārama, we value the relationships, links and communication between home and school. Communicating Learning (traditionally known as 'reporting') happens informally and formally throughout the school year - it is an ongoing process.

One way of communicating learning, is to engage with the online platform, Hero. This allows teachers to share learning and progress of students with families. We endeavour to use simple, honest language that communicates your child's progress and achievement to you.

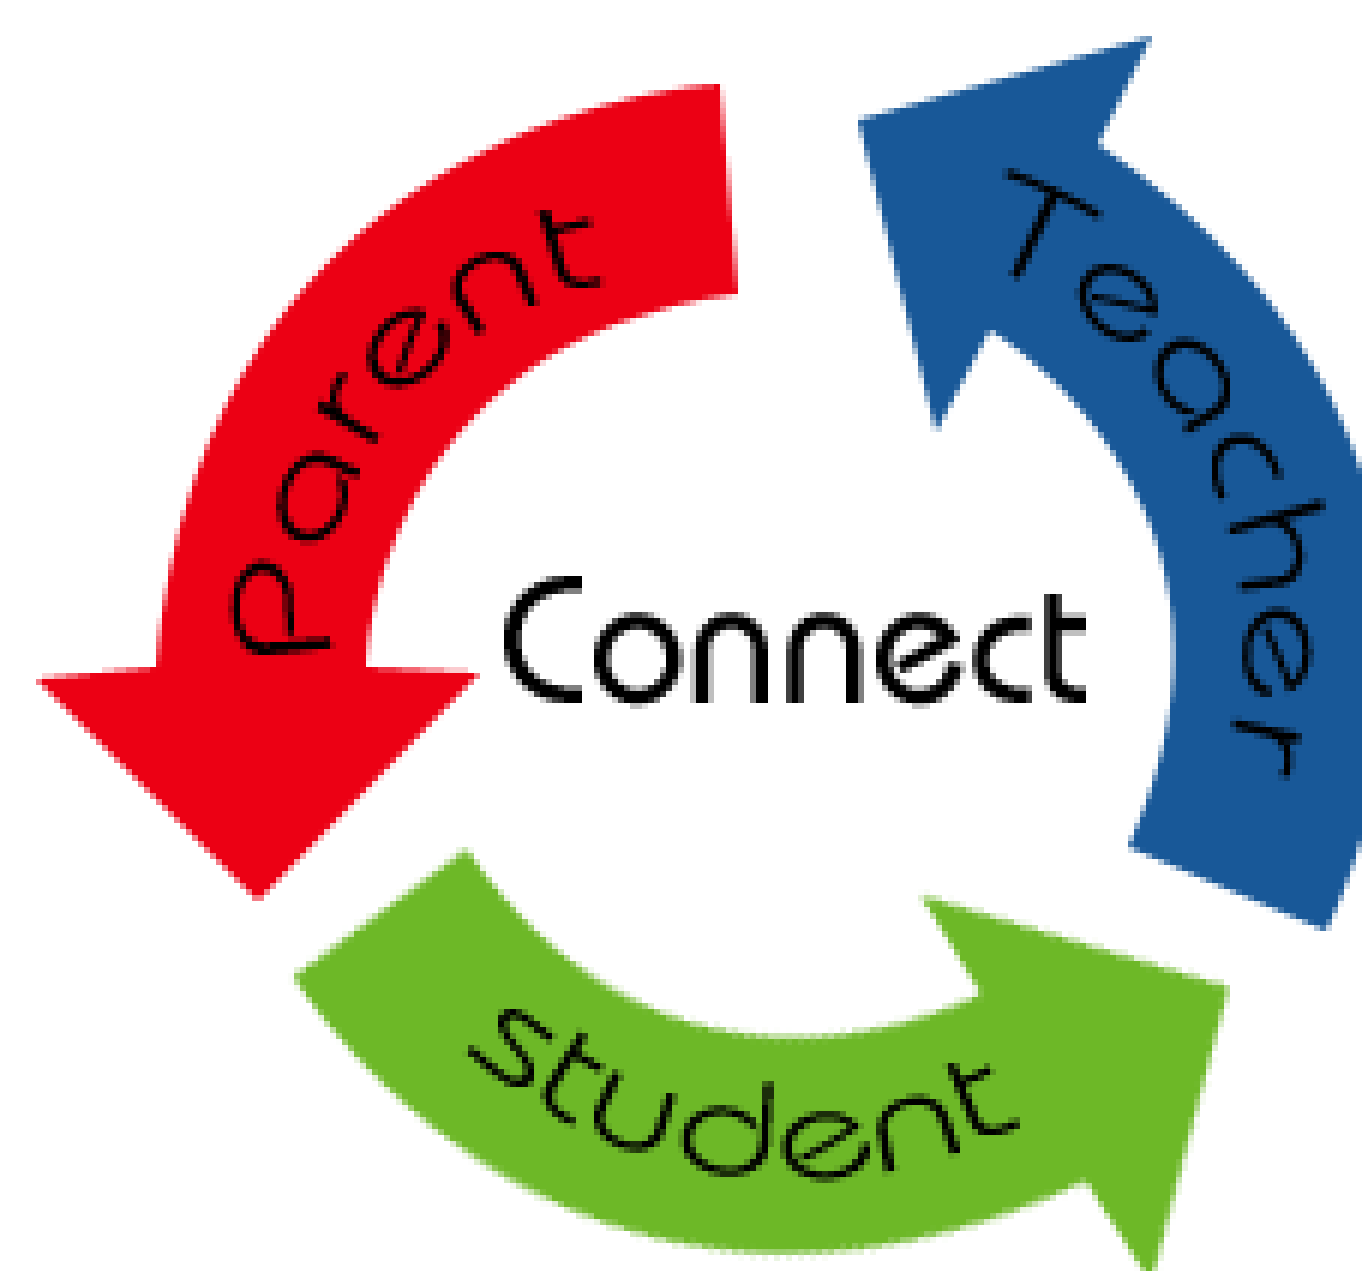

Other ways to communicate between home and school about learning, news and events, are with the use of emails, newsletters, and our School App. Your child's whānau teacher is also available to talk with at anytime. This can be done face-to-face, via email or phone.

Why it's IMPORTANT

Communicating learning is important to us, as it values the three-way partnership in a child's education.

Links to our

VALUES

We want our learners to be confident, creative, curious, collaborative, and community-minded.

These values we will be highlighted through learning at Te Ao Mārama, and will be communicated with parents.

It's all about

RELATIONSHIPS

Strong, meaningful relationships are essential for teachers to understand their learners; their strengths, interests and needs and be able to communicate this clearly to parents and whānau. Successful home-school partnerships mean more engagement for the learner. At Te Ao Mārama, we are committed to strengthening these partnerships.
